When the User accesses a website through a Google advertisement, a cookie, necessary for conversion tracking, gets to their computer. The validity of these cookies is limited, and they contain no personal data, therefore the User cannot be identified by them.

All Google AdWords customers receive different cookies, so these cannot be tracked through the websites of the customers of AdWords.

The information obtained with the help of the conversion tracking cookies serve the purpose of preparing conversion statistics for customers of AdWords who selected conversion tracking. This is how customers get informed about the number of users clicking on their advertisements and forwarded to a site with a conversion tracking label. However they do not get any information that could be used to identify any of the users.

If you do not want to participate in conversion tracking, you can refuse it by disabling the option to install cookies in your browser. After this you will not be in the conversion tracking statistics.

(<https://support.google.com/analytics/answer/2763052?hl=en>)

On behalf of the operator of this website Google shall use this information to evaluate how the User used the website and to prepare reports for the operator of the website related to the activity of the website and to perform additional services related to website and internet use.

Within Google Analytics the IP address forwarded by the browser of the User is not cross-referenced with other data of Google.
